Dagmar Glemme's paintings, lithographs and sculptures in ceramic, glass, bronze and stone have been shown in over 300 exhibitions world-wide. Dagmar's many pieces of public art include a painting for peace displayed at the UN in New York, the sculpture "Tree of Knowledge" outside Art Clinic in Jönköping and four large murals in the Church of Resurrection in Fort de France, Martinique.

In recent years Dagmar Glemme has designed glass sculptures in the furnaces at Berongo Fine Arts in Murano/Venice, Schott/Jena in Brazil, Bergdala Studioglas and Studio Micke Johansson, Örsjö.

Dagmar Glemme's largest public work to date is "Weg der Steine" ("Avenue of the Stones"), where twenty-one large stone sculptures (2-3 meters tall) adorn the streets in the heart of Uelzen, Germany. Dagmar is also the current artist chosen to paint the windows of a two-story tall advent calendar displayed on the facade of the old Town Hall of Uelzen each December.

Dagmar Glemme also produces art and music films, for example "The Six Elements" (2008) and an artistic portrait of the Swedish province of Halland, interpreted through the eyes of local musicians, artists and writers. She has designed several CD art covers and in 2012 she wrote and illustrated her first children's book, named "Colorful Lies". Dagmar Glemme is a member of KRO (The Swedish Artists' National Organization) and NVSK.

"The Black Madonna", one of four murals in The Church of Resurrection, Terreville, Martinique.

Dagmar Glemme's life

In the midst of raging war in 1942 in Poland, Dagmar Glemme was born. Raised by her German mother and grandmother she grew up in a post-war Germany. Dagmar acquired three degrees from the University of Hamburg: Architecture, Gymnastics & Dance Pedagogy and Art (painting and sculpting). In 1973 she moved to Sweden and after two years decided to make a living as a professional artist. During her long career as an artist, wherever she lived, Dagmar has always largely contributed to the cultural life around her. Some of Dagmar's credits include initiating the Nordic Art Fair in Sundsvall and establishing two art galleries in Halmstad: Toftasjö Konstgård and Särðals Mill. 2012 Dagmar Glemme founded her Dagmar Glemme Art Center with studio, exhibition halls and sculpture park in Hasslarp, Helsingborg. In 2017, Dagmar Glemme Art Center moved to Villshärad, Halmstad, where it resides today.
